BROKEN HILLS IS A MINING CAMP OF PROMISE

Mining men who have participated in a number of recent stampedes to new discoveries and have inspected prospects in new mining districts declare that the best showing of any of these is at what is known as Broken Hills, situated 12 miles northwest of Lodi, and about 20 miles from Fairbanks, near the southwest corner of Churchill county, says the Tribune. A postoffice has been established at the old Lodl camp, which is known as Marble. Joe Donnelly, formerly mine superintendent for the Goldfield Consolidated company, and Fred J. Amigo. have just come from the new district and are favorably impressed with what they saw there. They sampled veins in the district and secured some exceedingly good results, one assay across five feet of a vein, lying in porphyry walls, yielding $160 per ton in silver, and others of less width even higher returns.
